

Informed Consent for Email Regarding Appointments and/or Billing

Use of email as a means of correspondence involves a certain degree of risk to confidentiality. Although my therapist's computer utilizes additional security measures to ensure confidentiality, there remains a possibility that email may be intercepted in transmission over the Internet.

I understand this risk, however, if I choose, my therapist and I may utilize the option for scheduling appointments (referred to through email as "meetings") and/or questions I may have concerning my billing.

Client Signature

Date